Fieldhouse Cornerstone Is Laid Founders Day By Gov. Clements, Dr. Donovan, And Coaches

By Jerry Finch

Nearly everyone but the workmen building the UK memorial fieldhouse welded a trowel and applied mortar to the cornerstone of the new structure in a ceremony Tuesday morning at the site at Euclid and Lexington avenues.

Governor Earle C. Clements, former governor Keen Johnson, and Dr. Donovan were the first to go to work. They were followed by members of a Lexington Chamber of Commerce committee who assisted the University in obtaining the site. Basketball coach Adolph Rupp, football coach Paul Bryant, and athletic director Bernie Shively were called to aid the project.

Representing the UK basketball team was Wallace Jones, and Doc Ferrell, was honorary mason for the football squad.

Named Memorial Coliseum

Dr. H. L. Donovan, president of the University of Kentucky, delivered the principal address. He said he would recommend as the name for the new building, the "Memorial Coliseum."

"It is a worthy memorial to the 9,445 Kentuckians who sacrificed their lives for their country in World War II," he stated. "In this building, when it is completed, will be inscribed the name of each of them. This memorial is evidence that a grateful state has not forgotten, and as a tribute to those honored dead, I shall recommend to the Board of Trustees at its next meeting that this building be officially named the Memorial Coliseum, and that it be dedicated to their memory."

Donovan said that when he took office as president of the University in 1941, he was asked what kind of building program he would propose. He replied that he would ask for an appropriation for an athletic activities building, the cost of which would be approximately "equivalent to the cost of one of the nation's first-class bombers."

Fulfills Promise

"This building is the answer to the prayers of thousands of students, alumni, and citizens of this state," said the UK president. "We are witnessing the fulfillment of a dream and a promise."

He stressed that the building is not to be a fieldhouse in a strict sense of the word, but a coliseum. "In this hall we expect to have musical programs, student convocations, commencements, 4-H Club meetings, farm and home assemblies, and conventions. It is a building that can serve the University in manifold ways; not just a part of the University, but all of the University."

Appropriations for the building were made under three state administrators: Governors Johnson, Willis, and Clements. To supplement the funds a bond issue of $825,000 was sold. He added that the final cost of the building and its grounds will be "considerably less than that of one of the nation's first-class bombers."

Team To Return

Dr. Donovan received an approving response from his audience when he suggested that at the dedication (Continued on Page Five)

Group To Study Western Regions In Summer Camp

The Geology Department will hold an eight-week summer camp near Crested Butte, Col., according to Dr. Arthur C. McFarlan, head of the department.

The camp, located 120 miles west of Colorado Springs, will give the students opportunity to explore the mountainous regions.

Field camps, giving regular credit for the courses offered, are required for geology majors and are optional for other students.

Crested Butte was the site for last year's camp. In recent years trips have been taken to Virginia and the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Dr. McFarlan stated that nearly 40 students are expected to make the trip. The group will travel in 15-passenger station wagons and will leave Lexington June 15 returning the second week in August.

International Relation Group To Organize

An organizational meeting of the International Relations Club will be held today at 3 p.m. in Room 117 of the Social Sciences Building.

Dr. Amry Vandenberg, head of the political science department, has urged all students who are interested in international relations to attend the meeting.

SUB Bridge Tourney Winners Determined

Finals of the Interscholastic Bridge Tournament to determine the Southern winners was held Thursday in the SUB. The Southern winners will be sent to Chicago, with all expenses paid to participate in the national finals. Dr. Hobart Ryland, head of the romance language department, is tourney director for UK.

Governor Discusses UK's Role In Affairs Of Commonwealth

By Jerry Finch

A great state and a great university must move forward together, Governor Earle C. Clements said in his Memorial Hall address February 22 observing the fifth annual Founders Day convocation.

Speaking on the topic, "The Place of the University in Kentucky Affairs," the governor added, "This University cannot grow and progress as it should unless the economic level of all Kentuckians is progressively improved."

Dr. Donovan, president of the University of Kentucky, introduced Governor Clements as always a friend of the University. He went on to say that on this eighty-fourth birthday of UK, "we are thinking today of earlier teachers, for an institution is not built by one man or a dozen men, but all who have labored here in the past are in a sense founders of this institution."

Need Federal Aid

The governor briefly traced the development of the University from its founding in 1865 to the present time. He compared the objections of many persons to the provisions of the Morrill Act granting federal aid to education to similar controversy today. "Federal assistance does not necessarily mean federal intrusion into the field of education," he explained.

"It is my view," said the governor, "that education at all levels is no longer a local problem. It is a matter which effects the national welfare."

Turning toward the president of the University, Governor Clements said, "I would like for history to record that under Dr. Donovan the University of Kentucky reached maturity."

He added that under present leadership the University became a full partner in the endeavors of the administration and its followers to bring to Kentucky and Kentuckians a greater degree of prosperity and happiness than has ever been known.

Leads The State

"I would like it to be said of your President," spoke Clements to the capacity audience, "that he put the University in business as an instrumentality of the state whose first duty it is to lead the whole state toward a better, more secure, and more abundant way of life."

The governor expressed the current problem of the decline in population in Kentucky. Young men and women, looking for opportunity, are moving to the highly industrialized North and East.

"It is unthinkable that the young people of Kentucky receive in Kentucky schools a finer education than they are able to utilize within the borders of their native state," he said.

Dual Challenge

Clements said that the situation presents a dual challenge. To the older and younger generations. To the older generation to establish in Kentucky such diversified sources of employment that the young people can find suitable employment at home. To the new generation to create, to discover, to explore.

"Let the new generation find new uses for our resources and discover new ones...and let them be developed and expanded here at home, where every Kentuckian should find happiness and prosperity."

The governor cited the cooperation of the University with the state in exploring vocational fields.

"Many departments of the state will lean heavily upon you," he said, "for we regard the University of Kentucky as a great reservoir upon which we feel free to draw in our effort to contribute to the progress of Kentucky."

Three semester hours credit will be given for taking the tour. All interested students should attend this meeting.

Y's To Sponsor Play By Shaw For WSSF Drive

The University YM and YWCA will sponsor, "Arms and the Man," a comedy by George Bernard Shaw, to be presented by Barter Theatre in the Henry Clay auditorium on March 11.

Proceeds from the production will be turned over to the World Student Service Fund.

Barter Theatre, professional play group, was organized by Robert Porterfield in 1933.

Receiving its name from the unique custom of exchanging food for tickets during the depression, Barter began operating as a year-around theater when it reopened after the war. It has since become the largest professional repertory theater in America.

"Arms and the Man" a comedy-satire on war, shows the contrast between the professional soldier and the boastful officer of the "90-day wonder" type. The play was written in 1894 and takes place during one of the comic opera Balkan wars of the last century. It is the only Barter production that has toured for three consecutive seasons.

University Applies For Navigation Lab

Application has been made for a celestial navigation trainer laboratory by the University, Frank D. Peterson, comptroller, announced Tuesday.

The movement was approved by the executive committee at the Tuesday meeting.

The laboratory, which cost the government approximately $250,000, will be moved to the University from Tonotak, Nev., on a donation basis with no charges except those for freight and dismantling, if the project is approved.

It will be used in the study of aeronautics, astronomy, physics and mathematics, Peterson said.

WSSF To Open Drive On Tuesday

Ward, Darbshire Head Campaign

The World Student Service Fund, which campaigns annually in American colleges for funds to aid universities abroad, will open its UK drive Tuesday.

Bertha Florence Ward and Shelby Darbshire, co-chairmen of this year's drive, have expressed hope that there will be contributions from every student, faculty, and staff member. Solicitations will be made to the various campus organizations, residence units, town students, and the staff.

WSSF Is American Group

The World Student Service Fund is the American organization of World Student Relief, an international organization which works to relate the student relief efforts of 34 member nations.

WSSF was established in 1937 as the Far Eastern Student Service Fund, and expanded in 1939 to meet European student needs as well. Sponsored in this country by Protestant, Catholic, Jewish, and secular groups, this international relief effort on behalf of the student world is proving a demonstration in cooperation.

Aid Given In Five Fields

Through WSSF, help has been given by the students of this country to students abroad in five main fields: food, medical aid, books, clothing, and housing. Since its organization American students and teachers have given more than two million dollars for the relief of 870,000 needy university students and faculty members in Europe, China, and Southeastern Asia. Some of the specific things that have been accomplished with the contributions in the past two years are:

Establishment of nine complete book publishing units for universities where libraries were destroyed.

Provision of 100,000 pounds of food for European students in the academic year 1947-48.

Shipment of more than $12,000 worth of laboratory equipment to (Continued on Page Three)

Cokes, Poolrooms, WSSF

According to the Y.M.-Y.W. students spent $12,000 for cokes in the bookstore alone last year, and $9,000 in the SUB billiard hall. The reason for the digging up these fantastic figures is not to urge students to give up cokes or shooting pool, but to show them with that much extra change, students should be able to put a little of it into the WSSF. The World Student Service Fund drive starts Tuesday. The money it nets pays for some food, books, and clothing for students all over the world. UK has contributed generously in the past, and it is to be hoped that this year will be no exception.

Featuring Miss Dederling

Ingeborg Dederling, a German student who is now at the University, is writing a series of features for the Kernel. The first one, printed last week, was a most interesting comparison of German and American school life. In others, she will give her account of related topics. Miss Dederling writes very well indeed; she gives the reader insight into the viewpoint of a foreign student. Her articles should prove a valuable reading experience for all of us.

Can You Top This One?

When Groza sank that last basket that broke the Southeastern Conference scoring record Monday night, the crowd's terrific ovation showed what everyone was thinking: here is a great player, just possibly the greatest. And the same thought went for the UK team. The chances to see it play are dwindling out, and every University student realizes that here is a team we may still be calling "the greatest" when we've all been alumni for many years.

Engineers To Send Delegates To Meeting

Delegates from the College of Engineering will attend the district convention of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers at the University of Louisiana, Baton Rouge, March 2-5. Papers written by students of the southeastern district will be read at the convention. Three prizes, amounting to $50, will be awarded to the winning papers. Another phase of the convention program will be survey tours to various refining plants, power plants, TVA dams and manufacturing centers of the area. Mr. J. B. Berry Norlett, vice-president of the southeastern district, will preside at the convention assemblies. University of Kentucky delegates will leave Monday to arrive the Mardi Gras at New Orleans before arriving at the convention. The delegates are Prof. E. A. Bureau, Prof. B. B. Barnett, Ken Recktenwald, John Cashman, Jack Bell, Fred Marcum, and Gene Durham. George Washington's Birthday is a custom which originated in 179 B.C. on the island of Crete. Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

There is a certain existing condition that is causing a great deal of student (and, I believe, faculty) dissatisfaction, that I would like publicly discussed.

I am speaking, of course, of having the semester broken up by the Christmas holidays. I have yet to hear a person favor finishing the term's work after the vacation. Too, they consider it rather senseless, having a second vacation, three weeks later, between the semesters.

They complain the present system leaves everything in a state of turmoil and confusion from the middle of December to the first of February. Their study continuity is broken up and most of them spend a great deal of the Yule vacation worrying about term papers and exams that await them upon their return to school in January.

Why can't we finish up the term before Christmas? And then start the second term in January? What is the sense in having two vacations, and things so broken up?

I have talked to at least a dozen people and everyone of them had either scorn or amused contempt for the present system.

The following sample solution was favored by everyone I questioned:

- 1) Open school the first week in September, cut out all minor holidays and complete the term before Christmas.
- 2) Then, either have a prolonged holiday of two additional weeks (a total of one month) and resume school in the middle of January, and get out the usual time in the spring.
- 3) Or, resume school, as usual the first of January, and then get out by the middle of May.

I believe this plan would save time by eliminating the second vacation, or rather combining the two holidays into one. The administration would also be able to close out the old semester and be able to prepare for the second.

It would mean a fresh start for everyone after Christmas.

I am enclosing copies of this letter to Dr. Donovan, Dr. Chamberlain, and Dr. Seay for their comment and have requested that they answer through this column at their earliest convenience.

In the meantime, Miss Deiss, your comment will be greatly appreciated and anticipated.

I would like to urge campus groups and students-at-large to make public their opinions on this matter.

Unless there is some great financial reason why this plan would fail, I am sure the faculty would put it in force by next September, if they are convinced it is the desire of a greater portion of the student body.

In hopes of student and faculty support, I remain,

INTERESTED PARTY

(Your idea seems practical and is most interesting. But since the present system has been found academically feasible at pre-war UK, since it is the system used at most colleges, and since next year's calendar has already been set, it would probably be impossible to effect the change. Moreover, we're afraid there would be a wide difference of opinion among students about this, and that the more leisurely system might be favored.—Ed.)

Dear Editor:

We desire any information which you can give us leading to the identity of this young lady.

BOYS OF 509 ROSE STREET
(Cartoonist Herb Moore explains that it was just an optical illusion.—Ed.)

Dear Editor:

The conclusion I wished the editor to draw can be found in statements from "The University of Virginia," Hines and Cottrell, August 1948 "American Mercury": "...the system... on the whole... among students that a breach of honor is a personal insult." "It is considered a breach of honor to cheat, either in school work or in any other relations with students in the University." "...if things not inherently dishonorable are tried to be made so by legislation it will invariably result in the breaking down of the whole fabric of the system and robbing it of its power even over true breaches of honor."

To this observer, it necessarily follows that before such a system could succeed at UK, this fact must be true: there exists in the self of the UK student that kind of "honor" needed (1) not to cheat, and (2) to name cheaters to authorities. It is questionable whether the former is given more than lip service in many cases, and a conservative estimate as to those who possess the latter might be as small as five percent.

Obviously the editor is of the opinion that there is a birth of "honor" when one signs an honor system pledge card. (See the Kernel, Feb. 18, 1949, page two, column four, "...a student is not obligated to turn another in for cheating." Using the same logic I suppose the editor also believes that any place one drills for oil it can be found.

If the needed situations ever become inherently dishonorable to UK students, I am confident that most opponents to the "honor" system would retreat at least as to that aspect.

RALPH RANNEY

(In paragraph three) obviously the editor believes nothing of the sort. It takes a long time to build up the proper attitudes for an honor system, even if it could be done at all. The editor is of the opinion

Student Describes Life In Berlin Under Occupation By Allies, Reds

By Ingeborg Dederig

"But after all, isn't it very interesting to live in Berlin?"

Come on, dear American friend, let me show you this Eldorado and you will see.

But get your boots and your courage, so that you won't get lost in the mud.

We arrive at the airport in Berlin-Tempelhof. This is where the present heart of the city beats. This is the unique spot, where hope and confidence and new energy are unloaded with the cans and boxes from across the sea.

You are impressed, and you watch the arrival of planes the contents of which keep a city from starving.

We take a streetcar after we have left the airport. You glance through the window and do not seem to see anything in particular. This is American sector, as big posters on street corners tell you.

Over there, the huge building with the American flag on top, is "Telefunken." Something that was left over from Germany's industrial life. It is American headquarters now, hundreds of German employees walk through the doorway. Their faces look tired and worried, but not discontent. They have salaries. And they have daily noon meals without ration cards.

Enter Russian Sector. We proceed toward the center of the city, entering the Russian sector. And there it is suddenly. Berlin in ashes. Are you surprised? You have seen pictures. But this is reality.

Traffic noise echoes in window holes of empty houses at both sides of the street. The walls are cracked and turned black in fire. The sidewalks are covered with rubbish that has become harsh in rain and cold.

What is the matter? The streetcar has stopped. Electricity has gone. Never mind, this is not unusual. People get out and proceed on foot. Let's have a look around. We find a store among the ruins. The display shows children's toys of thin metal and wood. We remove the piece of heavy cloth that serves as door and go in.

Don't you want a souvenir of Berlin? The storekeeper brings a music box. He turns the key and it plays "Du kannst nicht treu sein," or "You Can't Be True, Dear."

Do you have eastern currency? The man asks. No, we haven't. "Sorry," the storekeeper says.

Afterwards we climb over a lamp post that lies flat on the ground. You look up and listen to the sudden sound of a piano that comes from behind us. We turn around and see nothing but the silhouettes of destroyed roofs and chimneys against the sky. But there comes life from the basement, where people live. There are tulips on the window board and garlic, planted in flower pots.

I want to show you something that is worthwhile seeing. We take a long walk and are right in the center of Berlin.

This is "Unter den Linden," Berlin's famous alley, where the Emperor had been cheered and — Hitler.

Linden Trees Gone

The Linden trees have gone. They were removed under the Nazi regime. You find nothing left of the glamorous opera houses, monuments, and museums. People walk along a dead street: poorly dressed Germans in ragged boots and dirty Russian soldiers.

And here we are. We stand in front of two Russian guards and read the golden letters over the entrance of the building, "House of Culture."

Take your gum out. American friend, these are sacred halls.

We enter and immediately find ourselves opposite Stalin's huge portrait. He looks grim. In fact, he has nothing to smile about.

We walk through the reception room, the library, and the theater. We admire gilded furniture, pompous wall-paper, thousands of volumes on Soviet literature, and a picture of Ivan the Terrible. Do we, really?

Or do we see and hear something behind the glitter, faces that are motionless and cruel, hands that are dirty and blood-spotted, voices that are eager and noisy?

Let's get out of here, friend. I feel my breath taken away from me.

When we come to Alexanderplatz, we get into a crowd of people. Black Market Center. Anything you want to buy? You won't need any ration cards, just a bit of both eastern and western currencies and a quick eye to catch the cop when he shows up.

Child Has Hungry Eyes. A small child approaches us and asks for something to eat. Need or misfortune? Anyway, give him something. He has so hungry eyes.

You look tired, my friend, and your shoes are all covered with dust. But let me show you one more thing before I take you home with me. We walk across the square to the railroad station. It is 6 p.m., and everybody comes from work who has any. We throw a glance at the mass that crowds around the ticket office.

We look into weary, unshaven faces and listen to unkind words when we are pushed up the steps with the stream. One woman makes a hysterical outcry. Her suitcase has opened and potatoes are rolling out, which are immediately stepped on by the masses. She may have gotten them from relatives on the country.

The train takes us out of the Russian sector back to the western area. Slowly the picture changes. People that now walk in at the shops are better dressed, their conversation livelier. One man tells about his troubles.

"I am working in the Russian sector," he says, "and I live in the American sector. I am paid in eastern currency, but what can I do with it? Eastern money has no value, and there are items, food and others, which I have to buy and pay for in western money in the sector where I live. If only the Russians . . ."

Where Is End

The Russians, the Russians, the Russians . . . people clench their fists when they speak the word and press their lips together in bitterness and despair. Where and when is an end to all this.

We get out of the train in Berlin-Steglitz. I want you to meet a friend of mine. We go to her apartment and you will see something funny.

We knock and she opens with a candle in her hand. Her household is granted a two-hour electricity supply within 14 days.

We come into the living room and you look puzzled. What's all this about?

Pots and bowls are placed all over the floor. They catch thin streams of snow-water that is slowly dripping through the ceiling.

"We haven't got a roof," my friend explains.

After we have left I tell you about our hostess. Her brother was a student at the University of Berlin which is under Russian control. He did not want to pretend, no, he didn't.

And he said something, something against the Red regime which had made his mind work and his blood boil. And then he disappeared, just didn't come back one day. His mother and his sister, however, received a tiny postcard, months later. It was printed and came all the way from Russia. It said that he was well, and working, and happy. Now they are waiting for his return.

Come in, American friend, you are welcome in our home. Mother will be back in an hour. Mother is standing in line across the street, where they have a special delivery of fish on our meat ration cards.

raid in 1945. We couldn't get the glass yet, and replaced it by large plates of cardboard.

When Mother comes back we have supper. We can't offer you turkey, but I know you are not asking for it. You came here to see how it is, and this is it. We have "verzauberte Schrippe," which would mean "bewitched bread" in your language. It is meant to be hamburger, but two thirds of bread replace the meat.

Don't mind father's silence, please. He is not unkind, but he has become a little strange since the Russians imprisoned him — for nothing. He went to see a friend in the Russian Zone and was arrested as a spy. Those weeks have been hard on him, and he can't get over it so easily.

And then at night, you lie awake and can't sleep. You listen to the barking of a dog who is as restless as you are. Afterwards you dream of soldiers who wear hammer-and-sickle symbols on their caps. They play on balalaikas and sing. And all the persons around move their arms and legs to the sound of the instruments, up and down.

Go back to your country, American friend, and enjoy it more intensively than ever, your freedom and your safety, your whole houses and your food.

And tell your folks that Germany is miserable but not hopeless. Say that we believe in America and in her stay with us, say that we have confidence.

Two things every college man should know!

1. This is a nightshirt. A flannel clammied. Made Grandmother see red. But tickled Grandfather's fancy. He took it with a nightcap (or two). Only kind of sleepwear "Manhattan" doesn't make.

2. This is a hint . . . for really restful snoozing, slip into a pair of roomy "Manhattan" pajamas. Durable cotton, rayon, and cotton and rayon prints. Luxurious Jacquards and Paisleys. Many equipped with stretchy "Manhattan" drawstring. Also smart sleepcoats and sleepshorts.

SOCIETY

The Spice Of Life

By Rubie Graham and Jobie Anderson

Well, here we come in Available Jones style . . . If you can't solve your problems, maybe we can.

Tom "Chole" Clore broke chips off several hearts when Harriet Chambers entered the University. We predict further interesting developments.

Since her unpinning, Mary McKinley has caused quite a bit of commotion on ye olde campus. Warren Crockett is making most of the noise.

Speaking of noise, the Delt frontier party last Saturday night was the loudest and wettest with guns, that is party of the year. The especially catty costumes belonged to Mickey "Dangerous Dan" Wilson, "Chief" Charlie Patrick, Jean Regan, Squirrel Catron, and Tommy Burke.

Robert Stone is still shopping around for a girl friend. They're as hard to find as a three-room apartment!

To keep you posted on the Woodward-Bauer affair, she made a gay call to him last Sunday close to midnight and things are looking brighter. We predicted it!

Squeaky Thomas and J. W. Davis are the outstanding equestrians of 40. They know the boss from one end to the other.

Perky visited Dot Wilkinson over the weekend. How does she keep them all fooled . . . or does she?

Joel O'Brien's constant is Margie Williams. He calls her "Snookums" when she's beyond carshot.

'Tis rumored that Betty Spragens is turning down all dates except those of a law school senior. How do you rate, Fred Daugherty?

Howard Mayhew is well pleased with Arden Milam.

Bobby Bidwell and Emmy Lou Patrick really played a losing game at W and L. They lost dates and clothes and even missed the train home. Barbara Harris and Hetsy Billster had a rip-roaring time too.

Apologies: Bob Violette is engaged to "Punch" Wheelon. Jo Davis is the gal on "Chase" Seaman's list, and Jerry Inman is Lucia Bland's heart stealer.

Joyland was really jumpin' last Friday night with Sigma Nus, Sigma Chis, Sig Eps, Phi Delt, and SAEs all over the place.

The Pinkerton man at Alumni Gym tried to take Dolly Haley's ticket book away from him. Auld Lang Syne, huh?

Hal Hughes has a top-notch rating with one editor of this weekly slaughter house. Guess who? (No comments in the KERNEL, office!)

Get Charlie Mitchell alias "Bilbo," to tell you about his troubles with the electric swords at Illinois.

Jack Spratt is quitting school Monday. He's going back to the country to "brew some dew."

If anyone is wondering about the mad Frenchman seen dancing madly down Euclid with a sword in each hand, it was only Charlie LeGette running from his pledges.

Constant twosomes: Dottie McDannell and George Cannon; Phyllis Oliver and John Ford.

Why did Charlie Chinn send the pledges out to get Mitty's lipstick on a handkerchief? Is he man or mouse?

Ho Sanders and Holmes Smart were seen together at a recent dance. Isn't that exciting?

Latest saying at the Pi Kap table in the Grill: "Congratulations, Queenie!" By the way, what happened to his pin?

Henry Taylor and John King both have an interest in Elsie Stokes.

The ATOs got called on the carpet for playing games on the roof. Burglars, maybe?

Hugh Morehead has done some awful "sweet" talking lately.

George Lawson fell out of his chair at Green Dome. He was play-shootin' at a lady's hat that had some mighty riled-up birds on top.

Billy Usher likes the Tri Delt so much that he is trying to have at least one date with every one of them.

Ray Turley has a touch of Florida in his room—a sun lamp and paper palm tree. Notice the burnt Sigma Chis on campus.

What does the Delt House hold in store for Jane Garrett?

Peggy Johnson can't choose between Rusty Fetterman and Dick Witt.

Who is the new pet in Patt Hall called "Poodles"? Could it be a new name that Diane has for Steve Rauh?

Pinned: Jeannette Blair and John Ladenburger; Frankie Barnett and George King.

Unpinned: Ruth Halverson and Ed Baker; Coo Hogan and Barkley Sturges.

Somebody get spring fever . . . quick!

Backstage Crews Hard At Work As Guignol Opening Night Looms

By George Reynolds

Over in the barn-like backstage of Guignol, they're chiselling skylines and sewing up holes in the night sky.

Such antics are required, they say, in preparation for the coming production of "Winterset." The set for the play is a study in perspective, with most of the action taking place under the buttments of a long bridge that melts into a city skyline in the distance.

Squads of girls have been shaping big sheets of laminated cardboard into scenery—an activity of a class called "Staging Techniques." Others perform such glorious functions as scrubbing badly beaten hotplates and splashing sizing on cloth flats.

Work For Keys

Some of them are working for Guignol keys. They all climb over discarded props and clothing like mountain goats in a snow storm, and pound with myriad hammers that send thunder down into the valleys—halls and classrooms outside.

The men working in the massive cardboard girders and arches of the bridge are dressed in anything from blue jeans to cashmere sweaters. They are attempting to enlarge a small scale model of the set.

Typical of the workman-like conversation: Rusty Russell looks up from his work and says "Don't use so many nails, you'll make the girder too heavy."

Crew Is Experimenting

Everybody backstage knew something about what the final set would look like—but invariably suggested that someone else knew more about it. After circling from the crew to Steve Rauh to Wally Briggs to Bill O'Bannon and back to the crew, the inquirer learned that it was really just experimental, and that dim barges and carbon-dioxide mist may move over the river, but then maybe they won't.

It's not really disorganizing. When the curtain rises on March 7, you'll probably smell salt air, and see a friend in a lighted hotel window across the river or on the deck of a shrimp-boat passing behind the players.

Newman Club Holds Tea

New Catholic students will be honored by the Newman Club with a get-acquainted tea in the SUB card room Tuesday from 4-6 p.m.

Mike Clure, president, said that fifty new students are expected to attend.

Fashion Fathers Follow As Male Opinion Wins; Sexy Spring Styles To Show Shapely Shins

By Rubie Graham

There's an old saying that the woman always has her way, but with the new trend in fashion this spring, who wouldn't be inclined to believe that the opposite sex has had quite a bit of influence? Yes, the skirts are going back up slowly but surely; perhaps before too long, the public will know that girls do have legs . . . by the sight test.

Christian Dior, the Parisian genius-designer most closely connected with the original groundward New Look, out-did himself recently by showing dresses a good 14 to 16 inches from the ground. The majority of American designers are not as radical as Dior in this respect. The average length for spring ensembles should remain from 12 to 14 inches from the floor. Coeds, especially the very young ones, may be expected to continue their too-long skirts until the dictates of fashion definitely decree against them. Short locks are here to stay for quite some time according to the spring fashion experts and stylists. Girls are all out for short hair because of the ease in caring for it. Short hair is not flattering to many girls, and it is not an absolute fashion precept. But to those who choose to leave it long, simplicity has become a basic prerequisite. The newest trend in haircuts is to clip the hair very close at the back. Who knows? We may be returning to the day of bobbed hair and flour-sack dresses!

Suede Hats In Style

Suede is making a come-back this spring in jackets. A local store features suede jackets in five or six styles and over a dozen colors, including pastels. A loose topper is available too. The same store advertises suede hats by a national showings.

Suits for spring come in almost every fabric and style known in fashion history. Gabardine remains as the top fabric. Almost without exception, suit skirts are pencil-slim. Jackets vary from fitted hip-length jackets to loose jackets which may double as toppers. Many come with belts and may be worn with or without them, or half-belted. These belts are usually extremely narrow.

Buttons are freely used on the suit jackets and often the detail is used too on the skirt. Boleros, capes, and weskits are good, especially in contrast. The best milliner. Suede and doeskin suits have also been featured in spring fests are obtained from blending shades of gray or brown in costumes. Plain colors are also effectively blended with tiny checks or shadow weaves.

Coats may be full or fitted. The full ones are perhaps best—the shoestring belt may be used to achieve the fitted effect. Gabardine and fleece are the best fabrics. There is no restriction on the length—they range from short toppers to hip-length and full-length coats. Capes of various lengths are good.

No Restriction On Length

Many of the more expensive coats have brilliant contrasting linings. A Louisville store recently featured a full-length loose coat on a chartruese fleece lined in American beauty crepe. A narrow gold-metal belt was used to achieve the nip-

State Geological Survey Makes Comeback After Norwood Blaze

Its program badly crippled by a costly fire just three months ago, the Kentucky Geological Survey now is engaged in making a comeback.

Though virtually all of its properties were lost in the flames which destroyed Norwood Hall on the University of Kentucky campus last November, Survey authorities have announced a large scale research program to be undertaken as funds become available.

Survey Began Last Summer

The Survey came back into existence only last summer when the Geological Division of the Department of Mines and Minerals was transferred to the UK Department of Geology. The Department of Mines and Minerals is a division concerned with safety inspection, policing and administration, while the Geological Survey is an organization for research.

One of the primary functions of the Survey is to collect and make available to industries for suitable plant sites, information concerning Kentucky's natural resources.

McFarlan Is Head

The present program of the Survey, as announced by Dr. Arthur McFarlan, head of the UK Department of Geology, includes plans for the study of the state's petroleum, limestone, clay, coal, iron ore and natural brine reserves.

"One of our greatest needs is to take a real inventory of what we have, through complete county-by-county studies, so we can supply basic data to operating and prospective operating companies," Dr. McFarlan stated.

State Competition

Industries planning to establish a plant near the source of their required raw materials are unwilling to wait long for information which they seek. For example, if a firm were considering both Illinois and Kentucky cities as a possible factory site, and the former were prompt to submit satisfactory data, the factory would almost certainly go to Illinois.

Unfortunately, however, detailed county-by-county studies must await the appropriation of its work on the proverbial shoestring, supplementing its full-time staff of just two men, most of whose time is taken up in answering routine inquiries, by assigning research projects to members of the Department of Geology staff.

Leslie County Studied

Indicative of the need for increased appropriations is the situation in Leslie county, where the United States Geological Survey recently has begun a two-year study of the county's geologic and mineral resources. The annual budget of the U.S.G.S. for work in this one county exceeds considerably the funds granted the Kentucky Geological Survey for all its work throughout the state, Dr. McFarlan explained.

To carry out the vast research program needed in Kentucky, the permanent full-time Survey staff should include, Dr. McFarlan estimated, four or five experienced geologists, a similar number of younger men, and additional part-time employees for the summer field season.

Five Years' Work Lost

The fire that leveled Norwood hall set back the work of the Survey by at least five years, according to Dr. McFarlan. Most damaging was the loss of records containing data supplying the basis for conclusions the Survey is called upon to make almost daily.

Routine work also has been hampered greatly. The Survey offices, for example, now occupy cramped quarters in the basement of Miller Hall. There are no publications to issue, the insurance providing funds for reprinting only the more vital ones.

Plans New Work

Despite the fire loss and the extremely limited budget, the Survey staff by no means has relaxed its efforts. It is planning a study of all gas and oil pools in western Kentucky and hopes eventually to extend this program to every section of the state.

Research is also underway on the Commonwealth's limestone resources which never have been fully utilized. In many areas of the state, there are high calcium limestone beds of such satisfactory thickness and purity as to make them well adapted for industrial usage. Compilation of complete reports on these deposits, Dr. McFarlan said, will constitute an important step in Kentucky's industrial growth.

Future In Brick And Tile

Though it will have to await the completion of more urgent work, study of the state's clay beds offers many possibilities. It is certain however, that the establishment of small brick and tile industries is possible in many Kentucky counties, the UK geologist stated.

The Survey is also cooperating with the U.S.G.S. in research work on the state's most important mineral resource, coal, and is conducting a study of western Kentucky iron ore deposits from the standpoint of occurrence, distribution and quantity.

Another important research project scheduled by the survey is a study of the state's natural brine resources. In addition to common salt, these brines — often found in gas pools — yield such valuable industrial and pharmaceutical materials as chlorine, soda ash, and caustic soda.

Official To Address Social Work Classes

Mr. Aaron Paul, director of the Department of Economic Security division of public assistance in the state at Frankfort, will speak to social work classes at UK Wednesday.

of the building when it is completed, that the present UK basketball team be invited to return and play whatever team the University will have then.

The trowel used to lay the mortar was a 1911 Christmas gift to Dr. Donovan from a group of alumni. They asked that it be used in laying the cornerstone of the proposed fieldhouse. The trowel was bedecked with a red ribbon for the occasion.

In spite of the rainy weather, Col. G. T. MacKenzie, commanding officer of the UK ROTC unit, estimated the crowd at 500.

The laying of the cornerstone was part of the fifth annual Founders Day observance.

Will Seat 12,000

When completed the Memorial Coliseum will seat about 12,000. Its interior space will be equivalent to that of a six-story building one block square. In addition to the sports arena, there will be offices for the physical education department and coaching staffs, a regulation size swimming pool, modern press and radio facilities, and concession space.

On the cornerstone is engraved "1942-1950, This Stone Placed on Founders Day, February 22, 1949."

In the cornerstone will be placed the Memorial Edition of the Kentucky Almanac; copies of newspapers in which the cornerstone ceremonies are reported; the general catalog of the University for 1948-49; information booklets on UK's basketball and football teams; President Donovan's annual report for 1948; a copy of the Founders Day program; a copy of "The University of Kentucky — Its History and Development," by Prof. Ezra L. Gillis; several team photographs and pictures of the building under construction; and a campus picturebook.

First General Highway Conference To Convene On Campus March 3

The first general Kentucky Highway conference will be held at the University on March 3-4.

Invitations have been extended to members of the State Highway Department, county officials, city engineers, members of the Kentucky Society of Road Engineers, and those interested in road equipment. An estimated 400 delegates are expected to attend.

Purpose Of Conference

The purpose of the Conference is to unite highway and state officials and engineers for the interchange of ideas on the design, construction, and maintenance of streets.

Registration will be held in Anderson Hall. Several of the speakers scheduled to address the assembly are Earle C. Clements, governor of Kentucky; D. V. Terrell, dean of the College of Engineering; H. L. Donovan, president of the University; D. H. Bray, state highway engineer; John A. Keck, commissioner of highways; N. W. Daugherty, dean of the College of Engineering at the University of Tennessee; Prof. C. S. Crouse, secretary of the Kentucky State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers; and Prof. R. E. Shaver, head of the department of civil engineers at UK.

"Highway Safety" Discussed

Topics of discussion will include "The Relationship of Highway Builders to Society," "Design, Construction, and Maintenance of City Streets," "Highway Safety," "Use of Polarized Headlights," and "Allocation of Funds for a Rural Highway Program."

Fashion Fathers

ped-in effect.

Date dresses will emphasize the plunging neckline. Although some V-shapes are being shown, the most popular seems to be the U-shape. Off-shoulder and strapless styles remain, although most of them are accompanied by jackets and boleros with a covered-up look. Back interest remains.

As for color, almost every shade in the paint store has been reproduced in textiles. Yellow and chartreuse have assumed a leading role. These shades, especially chartreuse, are used extensively as a contrast with navy. Blond accessories are to be popular, especially the blond shades in hostery. (Pastels are again being shown at hostery counters in the larger department stores.)

The spring fashion picture is one of the most diversified in history. No one knows where it will go next. The one important objection, the extra long skirt, is being removed from the fashion portrait.

No radical innovations are expected on campus. But these things are nice to know anyhow!

Tournament To Name UK Bowling Champion

The SUB sports committee will sponsor a bowling tournament at the Colonial Bowling Alleys starting March 7 to name a UK bowling champion.

The tourney will be March 7 and March 15 with games being rolled at any time in that period. An entrance fee of $1 will be charged and will include the fees for three games at 25c per game and 25c for a trophy fund. Entrance blanks may be found in Room 212, SUB.

The tournament will consist of three games by each participant, and a final set of three games by those with the top scores. The players will pay for the final three games. Highest scorer here will be Tuesday.

Dean Stahr To Speak At Phalanx Meeting

Elvis J. Stahr, dean of the College of Law, will speak on "The Comparison of the United States and English Educational Systems" at the Wesley luncheon meeting of Phalanx fraternity in the SUB Tuesday.

ly regarded Tulane 56-54, last Monday night, at Nashville.

Picking an All Conference honor five is going to be a great deal more difficult than in 1947, when five native Kentuckians were selected.

Individual stars in the running for the honor are Tennessee's Paul Walther, Tech's Jim Nolan and Colin Anderson, Vandy's Billy Joe Adcock, Georgia's Joe Jordan, Tulane's Jim Riffe and Warren Perkins, and Kentucky's Barker, Beard, Groza, Barnstable and Jones.

Barring the biggest upset Southern basketball has ever known, the Kentucky Wildcats should stroll to their sixth consecutive Southeastern basketball crown.

Several additional sportswriters are needed by the Kernel for this spring. Anyone interested is asked to come to the Kernel News Room this afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock. Previous experience, while not necessary, would be very helpful.

The News Room is located in the sub-basement of McVey Hall, Room No. 11.

Alex Groza, Ralph Beard and Wallace (Wah Wah) Jones were selected last Tuesday on the Associated Press' first annual All-SEC basketball team.

Cliff Barker was placed on the second five, and Dale Barnstable as nominated for the third squad.

Sixty ballots were submitted by coaches, officials and Southern sportswriters with Groza barely nosing out Beard for the highest number of votes.

Last year, Jones, Beard and Ken-ny Rollins made the All-SEC team; and in 1947, five Kentuckians, Jones, Beard, Jack Tingle, Joe Holland, and Rollins were selected on the first five.

DisKintucky Sports Review

— By Tom Diskin, Sports Editor —

Coach Adolph Rupp informed us this week that 18 basketball games had already been scheduled for the 1949-50 season.

"We won't be running all over the country like we're doing now," the famed mentor stated. He went on to say that the Wildcats will play "22 or 23" games at the most" next year.

Home and home games have been carded with the following teams: DePaul of Chicago; Vanderbilt; Georgia Tech; Xavier; Tennessee; Alabama; Mississippi; and Georgia.

Site of the away game with Mississippi will probably be Memphis. The Cats will meet Xavier again next winter in the Cincinnati Gardens.

In addition, Coach Rupp stated that St. John's College of Brooklyn and the University of Arkansas have been scheduled. Madison Square Garden will be the scene of the Kentucky-St. John's clash, while the Arkansas tilt will be played at Fayetteville, Arkansas.

The Baron said that he hoped to have St. John's play here each season after the UK fieldhouse is finally completed.

Negotiations are underway now for carding Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind.

"We don't know for sure about the Notre Dame game, but we'll probably be playing them again next season," said Rupp.

Alex Groza, Ralph Beard, Walt Wah Jones and Cliff Barker will all make their grand finale on the home court tomorrow night when the Wildcats play Vanderbilt's rising Commodores from Nashville.

These four players have been the big stars for Kentucky since 1946. During their time with Coach Rupp and the Big Blue, the Wildcats have been generally recognized as "the greatest team in the history of collegiate basketball."

For many students, this will be the last time they will see Messers, Groza, Beard, Jones and Barker in action. They have earned the University of Kentucky national and international fame as a result of the amazing skill in the roundball game.

As everyone knows, these four, along with Kenny Rollins, now starting for the Chicago Stags pro cagers, teamed up with the Phillips Oilers, and four other chosen hoop standouts, to win the Olympic basketball championship of the world last summer in London, England.

The four Kentucky basketballers have helped UK win numerous titles and championships. They have been highly praised in newspapers, magazines, books, and on the radio. They have appeared in movies. In fact, their experience here at Kentucky even outdoes a Frank Merriwell fiction story.

The Big Four are known from Los Angeles to London for their sensational basketball ability.

They have earned a million dollars worth of publicity for our institution and have always been a credit to the University by their conduct and their play.

Tomorrow is a day that Coach Adolph Rupp and the many thousands of Kentucky followers hate to see. It means the end of an unforgettable era is drawing to a close.

For after the Vanderbilt game, only the post-season tournaments remain. Then Father Time will beckon the boys and the younger Wildcats will move in and attempt to replace these four greats.

During the time that Beard and Jones have been playing for Kentucky, the Cats have won 121 games, while losing only nine.

Groza has seen the UK's Dixiecats cop 102 wins in 110 encounters.

Barker, while on the squad, has helped the Lexington Lynxes capture 93 victories in 100 skirmishes.

The Associated Press, in an early poll, named three Kentucky Wildcats to the All-Southeastern Conference first team this week. Another Kentucky player was placed on the second team, while the fifth UK starter was nominated for the third quintet.

On the first team were Alex Groza, Ralph Beard and Walt Wah Jones. Cliff Barker was on the second squad, and Dale Barnstable was named in team No. 3.

Paul Walther, of Tennessee, and Virgil Risner, of Tulane, were the others to make the first-team selections.

Many SEC followers will differ with the AP writers in their nomination of Risner over the Cats' versatile Barker, who has often been called the most underrated player in college basketball.

ed the most underrated player in college basketball.

Coach Rupp's record here at UK since 1930 as the Vanderbilt approaches is 37 victories and 71 losses for an average of .841—very probably the best in the nation for any length of time.

For the last six seasons, the Wildcats have taken 162 games in 177 encounters giving the Ruppmen a terrific average of over 91 percent.

About the only thing that can stop the Kentucky basketballers from winning both the National Invitational and the NCAA crowns next month (if UK officials accept both bids and it now appears that they will), is an injury to one of the key players.

Should the Cats win both crowns, they will become the first team in history to do so. Only one team has ever participated in the two tournaments. That was the Utah Redskins in 1944.

The Utes went to the NIT first. The Kentucky quintet quickly eliminated them in the first round, 46-38. Shortly thereafter, the Arkansas team had several players badly shaken up in an auto accident and withdrew from the NCAA Western playoffs in Kansas City.

Utah was asked to replace them. The Redskins then won the Western Division and returned to New York where they pulled a mighty upset and licked St. John's, 48-36, in the NCAA finals. St. John's previously had topped Rupp's Raiders, 48-45, in the semi-finals.

Alex Groza last week proved beyond a doubt that he is the No. 1 center now in collegiate basketball. We believe that the big boy will go great in professional ball. He is now 22 years old. Most sports experts say that an athlete reaches his prime at 27 years of age. This means that Groza will probably keep improving for the next four or five seasons, which is bad news for opposing pivots.

Not very often does one see a tall center, weighing over 220 pounds, steal a basketball from the hands of an opposing player (as did Groza against one of Georgia's fast little guards) and outrace him down the court for an easy layup. That was about the sixth time he has pulled that trick this season.

Ed Mikan, former pivotman for DePaul, is now the starting center for the Chicago Stags. He is nowhere near the caliber of Groza. By comparison, therefore we might say the cage future of Alexander the Great appears very bright.

We wonder if there will ever be another team like the present Kentucky quintet. Right now, the Cats not only have the best coach and center, but also the top guard in collegiate ranks in Ralph Beard.

Beard, while somewhat overshadowed recently by Groza, has been playing excellent ball. The speedy Louisville Lad averaged slightly over 10 points-per-game while playing on a swollen ankle, which he claims "doesn't hurt hardly at all."

His ankle was hurt early in the Bradley game, but Beard insisted that he be allowed to continue playing. Then against Tennessee three nights later he played, although slowed up by the injury, which prompted one writer to make a classic remark that The Little Man was about to be replaced on the starting five by a reserve.

A few nights later, Beard made the scribe eat these words by turning in his usual bangup game against Xavier as he hit eight baskets while still handicapped by his ankle. He has continued to play outstanding ball since.

One factor that has been overlooked by sportswriters is the scarcity of standout guards.

Offhand we can name only two really great collegiate guards in the entire nation. Next to Beard, only Notre Dame's O'Shea even comes close with the possible exception of UK's own Cliff Barker.

Good centers are not too rare. Behind Groza come Easy Ed Macauley (St. Louis), Bob Harris (Oklahoma A & M), Bob McIntyre (Minnesota), Vern Gardner (Utah) among others.

At forward, there are Walt Wah Jones, Tony Lavelli (Yale), Vince Boryla (Denver), Dike Eddleman (Illinois), Dick Dickey (North Carolina State) and Bob Cousy (Holy Cross).

But at guard, there are only the aforementioned two who are nationally recognized as All-Americans.

Beard, in the last 130 games that Kentucky has played has been sidelined only for one game—that being after the Cincinnati game when he injured his right leg at the ancient Music Hall.

And while on Beard, we were glad to see that Ed Fitzgerald gave a very good writeup on The Little Man in the current issue of SPORT magazine. Fitzgerald, one of the best feature writers in the business, also did a fine story on Lou Boudreau last summer for the same publication.

In this article, it is related how the Falls City Flash nearly left UK for the University of Louisville in his freshman year. Another interesting feature is that Beard prefers pro ball over a career with the Phillips Oilers.

It stands to reason that Beard will do very well with the professional team that he does choose, despite some comment to the otherwise because of his size.

He is only one inch shorter than Ken Rollins, who is now doing quite well for the Chicago Stags at the present time.

Another thing is that he hit for 23 sensational points against the Phillips Oilers last March in the finals of the Olympic Trials when the big chips were really on the table. He was the only UK player to score over 10 points that night. Bob Kurland, giant center of the Oilers, tallies 20.

This Phillips quintet had two guards that were 5' 10", one-half inch shorter than Beard, who states that "every team seems to have at least one short player."

Pathfinder News Magazine has a four-page spread on the Kentucky Wildcats in the current issue, written by its sports editor, Watson Penmore, who spent several days here gathering material and pictures of the team. A color photo of Kentucky-St. John's game last Dec. 18th in Madison Square Garden appears on the cover.

In the March 5 issue of Colliers, which goes on sale today, Bill Fay, sports editor of that magazine, has a series of seven questions and answers with Kentucky's widely-known Coach Adolph Rupp.

Fay who interviewed Rupp while

Alex Groza Sets New Conference Scoring Record Against Georgia

As a result of hitting 12 shots in 27 attempts, for an average of 44.4 percent, Kentucky's Alex Groza established a new Southeastern Conference individual scoring record as he pushed in 38 points against the Georgia Bulldogs in Alumni gym last Monday night before an excited all-student audience.

The huge Hungarian garnered 12 fielders and 14 of 20 free throws for his total in the 33½ minutes that he played.

The big boy from Martin's ferry, Ohio, had 21 markers in the first half of this tilt and when the public address announced the individual scoring at intermission most of the students were sure that he would go on to break Billy Joe Adecock's mark of 36, which the Vanderbilt star just set on Feb. 14 in Nashville against the Mississippi State Maroons.

Lipscomb Had Record Coming into this season, the record was held by Pinky Lipscomb who scored 31 tallies in one game back in 1939. Then Groza tied this mark last Jan. 31 when UK played Vanderbilt in Nashville.

On Feb. 8, the All-American center broke that record when he scored 34 against Tennessee here in Alumni Gym. Then six nights later, Adecock, a high-scoring forward who has another season of eligibility remaining, shattered the mark of UK's senior pivotman when he hit for 36 tallies. Now 38 is high.

Alexander the Great also broke the Wildcats' individual scoring record held jointly by him and Leroy Edwards at 34 points. Edwards scored this total against Creighton here in the 1935 season.

After Another Mark Now Groza is now after another mark. That is the SEC scoring record for points in one season. He had a total of 478 for 244 games going into the Xavier tilt, which is just 26 points short of the record of 504.

He missed by only 18 points of breaking this mark last season as he hit for 488 tallies in 39 contests.

the Wildcats were down in New Orleans for the Sugar Bowl games, asked the Baron "how do the percentages run?"

"If you make 22 percent of your shots, you lose," replied Rupp. "If you make 33 to 28 percent, you're in for a tight game. If you make 30 percent, you win. Last year we averaged 31.2 percent for 29 games."

"Nicer but not so Expensive"

Kentucky Basketeers: Dale Barnstable

Dale Barnstable, starting forward of the Kentucky basketeers, very nearly joined a different pack of Wildcats after his discharge from the Army in the spring of 1946.

After returning to civilian life, Barney decided to see about joining the Northwestern University Wildcats, since the NU campus is located only 30 miles or so from his home in Antioch, Ill.

He contacted school officials there and also talked with the head basketball coach. They told the blond, six-foot, two and one-half inch eager that they would get in touch with him in a few days.

However, after a week or so passed and no word from Northwestern, Barnstable grew impatient and decided to write Coach Adolph Rupp. The Baron immediately replied and told him to come down to Lexington for a workout.

Rupp was impressed with him and told the Illinois lad to report back to him in November.

Barney survived the rugged competition for the varsity that fall and teamed up with Jim Lane to become Rupp's prize freshman players for the 1946-47 campaign.

Named Over Jordan and Brannum When March rolled around, Coach Rupp had to choose from his loaded squad 10 players for the Southeastern Conference tournament in Louisville. Conference regulations prevented any team from taking more than 10 to the tourney.

After considerable speculation from sportswriters and fans whom the chosen few would be, Rupp named Freshmen Dale Barnstable and Jim Lane over All-Americans Jim Jordan and Bob Brannum.

Both Barney and Lane later were selected for the traveling squad for the National Invitational meet, in which the Cats lost a heartbreaker to Utah, 45-49, in the finals.

In his first year, the 23-year-old basketeer who was born in Barrow, Wis., played in 29 of UK's 37 games and scored 71 points, hitting 33.3 percent of his field goal attempts.

Last season, Dale saw action in all but one of the Cats' 29 tilts and poured through 176 tallies. His field goal average this season was 27.1 percent.

Now, as a junior, he has scored over 140 points so far, making him the No. 4 scorer on the team.

The likeable lad, who is also used occasionally at the guard position has been especially outstanding whenever the Wildcats play DePaul of Chicago.

Scores 17 Points

Last Jan. 31, Barney played a brilliant game against the Demons in Chicago Stadium, leading the UK's to a 8-1 win by scoring 17 points — one more than Ralph Beard.

Many of his friends and relatives from Antioch came down to the Windy City for this game, and he complied for them by hitting several long shots which helped the Cats beat a tough DePaul quintet.

Then last Dec. 8, when the Big Blue tangled with Coach Ray Meyer's Demons in the second game of the season at the Louisville Armory, Barney and Beard again paced the Ruppmen to a victory over the

Kentucky's Four Stars To Make Final Home Appearance Saturday

By Dudley Saunders
Hurry! Hurry! Hurry! Last chance to see the Champion Wildcats.

Four of the greatest players in Kentucky cage history make their final Lexington appearance tomorrow night when the Wildcats close their regular schedule with Vanderbilt Commodores. Ticket No. 27 is good for admission.

The curtain will ring down on the Alumni Gym careers of Cliff Barker, Ralph Beard, Alex Groza, and Wallace Jones, each a veteran of four years service under Coach Adolph Rupp.

It is the final regular start of the season for both teams, prior to the SEC tournament in Louisville, March 3, 4, and 5.

Kentucky goes into the game with a 24-1 record, and unbeaten in its last 16 starts. The Cats will also be seeking their 59th consecutive SEC victory, and 74th straight win on the home court.

The last conference loss was to Tennessee, 35-34, in a regular season game in 1944-45. Ohio State's 45-40 win over Kentucky in the 1942-43 season was the last time the Cats were beaten in Alumni gym.

Vanderbilt enters the game with a season record of 14-6, and a conference record of 9-4.

In the first meeting of the two teams this year, the Tars stayed even with the Cats until the score reached 21-all, but Kentucky went on to win 72-50. Billy Joe Adcock got 22, and Groza got 31, to pace their respective teams.

Kentucky has won 39 of the 48 encounters with the Nashville, Tennessee school, including the last 14 meetings.

Vandy just missed being seeded fourth for the tourney and regardless of what happens tomorrow night, probably will be favored to advance to a semi-final meeting with second-seeded Tulane.

Beat LSU and Tulane The Commodores beat two of the top-seeded tourney teams in three days, the past week-end. They out-pointed fourth-seeded LSU, 61-51, last Saturday, and Monday pulled the conference surprise of the year.

star" teams and the standout of ETO basketball.

In one game with the Fourth Armored Division, Towery hit for 41 of the team's 86 points. On the latter team was Doug Kenna and Dale Hall, ex-West Point greats, and Bob Lavoy, now Western Kentucky's starting center.

Tico later contacted Rupp about Barney, and his fine possibilities, and writes "It took me two seasons to talk him into going to Kentucky, or at least let Coach Rupp look him over. I knew the Baron would like him and, well, you know the rest."

Barney, Tico, and the 71st Division eagles went on to chalk up a record of 3 wins and five losses. They were beaten in the ETO (European Theater of Operations) basketball finals in a double overtime.

One Season Left Barnstable, an A student in high school and majoring in physical education here at UK, has one more season of eligibility remaining. He and another junior, Jim Lane, will have a major part in determining just how successful the Cats will be next season.

One thing is certain — Barney always gives his best. He is one of the most conscientious and hardest-working players on the great Kentucky squad.

Unbeaten Frosh Whip Wesleyan For Third Time

By Tom Spillman

Keeping his point average exactly at 20-per-game, Big Bill Spivey, center on the University freshman basketball team, lead the quintet to their 11th straight victory against no setbacks, as they defeated the frosh of Wesleyan, 77-52, last Friday night in Alumni Gym before a crowd of 3,000.

Following "Grits" Spivey in the scoring parade was Bobby Watson, with 11. Watson won the crowd's favor soon after the game started when he made several driving crisp shots and gave some beautiful handoffs to his teammates.

The entire first half was featured by excellent floor play by the future Wildcats, but in the second half their offense slowed down considerably.

The big attraction of the evening, from a spectator viewpoint, was Spivey, who gave the fans a charge when he sank several of his special hook shots from about 15 feet out.

Butler Gets 14

Playing a good game for Coach "Bullet" Wilson, of Wesleyan, was Jim Butler, at guard, who collected 14 points in addition to playing an excellent floor game. Charles (Sonny) Hylton, who played for the Clark County Cardinals, scored 10 markers and was on the boards constantly to be one of the driving powers of his team.

Bud King, George Lambros, and Dick Swan were swarming all over the backboard for Kentucky in the ran wild against Mississippi State, 90-45.

It was against Mississippi State that Adcock broke Groza's first SEC single game record of 34 points. He hit 19 of 29 shots and four free throws for a total of 36 points. He added six points in the last minute and 45 seconds of the game.

▼Cuff Notes▼

Joe Holland, All Conference forward for the Wildcats in '47, is now playing with the West Virginia All-Stars.

Playing with Holland last Saturday night when the All-Stars dropped a 48-46 decision to the Cleveland Browns, was Bill Hall, former Marshall College guard, who led the nation in scoring three years ago.

The Cleveland Browns, made up of members of the Brown's professional football champions, had Lou Groza, All-Ohio basketball in high school and brother of Kentucky's Big Al, in the pivot. Otto Graham, All American in both football and basketball at Northwestern, is the playmaker for the Browns.

Holland scored ten points for the losers.

Except Kentucky, no one has beaten Vanderbilt by more than three points (Tennessee 53-51 and 67-64, and Auburn 48-45), and the Commodores won four straight con-last of the first half — completely cutting the opposition out from the basket.

The outcome of the game was never in doubt. Len Pearson, Kitten guard, put UK ahead, but Wesleyan's Blake tied the score.

Not to be stopped, Pearson racked in another goal, and from then on Kentucky was never headed.

The score at half-time was 43-24. A low number of personal fouls were called in the game, with 20 against Kentucky, and 17 against Wesleyan.

Kentucky made 33 of 92 field goal attempts for an average of 35.8, while Wesleyan hit 18 of 63 for 28.5. At the end of the first half, the UK frosh had 44.4 percent and Wesleyan had 33.3 in the field goal department.

ference battles by increasingly, while leaning back in-court. The overwhelming scores. Bob Polk's ball never even touched the rim as it sank straight through the net for the two points that meant a new record.

The old record of 31 points which Groza tied when Kentucky beat Vanderbilt 72-50 on January 31 before setting the temporary record of 34 on February 8 as Kentucky topped Tennessee 71-56, had been held by Vanderbilt's Pinky Lipscomb since 1947. Last Monday however, Big Al came back to beat Adcock as he scored 38 against Georgia.

The Kentucky basketball team has the greatest drawing power of any collegiate cage team in the nation. A recent example of this was seen in Cleveland.

The Kentucky — Bowling Green and the Penn-Akron doubleheader in the Cleveland Arena drew a total of 13,133 people on Jan. 11th. The latter game probably accounted for the 133 persons in the above figure.

Against Mississippi State Adcock was right. He fired 29 times from the field, hit 16 of them for a .552 percentage, and added four free throws to set a new Southeastern Conference individual scoring record for 36 points. Mississippi State's 11 players altogether made nine points more than Adcock.

With a minute and 45 seconds of play remaining and the score 80-43, the information was relayed to the team that Adcock had 30 points and was within striking distance of Alex Groza's record of 34. Craiz, Kelley and Robinson started feeding to Billy Joe, and little Hank Duvier outdid himself in stealing the ball from any Maroon who happened to gain temporary possession.

Adcock tightened momentarily at the full realization of the possibilities before him, and with his first shot missed the backboard completely. But he recovered immediately and broke into the open for two quick trips to tie the record.

Then in the last 30 seconds, trapped in the left-hand corner, guarded and actually standing beyond the backboard, Billy Joe maneuvered enough to fire at the basket with a high-arched throw
